

EDITOR'S NOTE

The Journal's Editorial Board expresses its regrets for having published the article Used and abused, the love story between the Tustea dinosaur nesting site and the Hațeg Country Dinosaur Geopark in its volume of 2012 (Tome 56, No. 1–2). Apart from a few scientific observations, the article makes broad criticism – questionably substantiated – of the way Hațeg Geopark is being managed. Professor Dan Grigorescu's reaction, who – by “right to reply” sent us an explanatory article – is justified and appears to be well-grounded. We assume the error of having accepted for publication in our Journal an article that exceeds the “scientific research framework” in content but, at the same time, we do not consider creating in this Journal a platform for controversies only apparently “scientific”. Therefore, we kindly ask the author to understand our decision of not publishing his reply.

At the same time, we would like to ask Prof. Dan Grigorescu to accept the invitation to submit a paper to our journal, highlighting Geoprak's history and evolution, as well as his main achievements in this respect.
